Kevin McWhinney (L) and Jean-Paul Deschênes (R) of London Life present trophy to Western Captains.

TOURNAMENT HISTORY

The Centennial Basketball Tournament was initiated in the 1966-67 season at Loyola College to commemorate Canada's 100th Anniversary. The Tournament was designed to bring top-calibre university basketball to the Montreal area and coincided with the opening of Loyola's new gymnasium and Athletic Complex.

The opening years of the Tournament were dominated by schools from the United States, with Plattsburg State (twice), Brandeis, Norwich, Adelphi and Colgate, all winning titles before Acadia University broke the ice for Canada in 1973 and 1974. Loyola never won the Tournament Title as Loyola College, however, after the merger with Sir George Williams, the newly created Concordia Stingers of Concordia University got into the championship win column. Since 1975 the Stingers, under Doug Daigneault have won the title on three occasions. Last year the University of Western Ontario captured Tournament honours.
